1. The only road bridge across the Neisse River available in Goerlitz is that located near the townhall. The bridge is a wooden structure built on old stone foundations. It is serviceable for motor vehicles of all kinds. The bridge is guarded by Russian sentries. (1)
2. The railroad viaduct near Goerlitz has not been reconstructed by 13 November 1951. No construction work was observed there. (2)
3. The former road bridge at the retaining dam opposite the large mill is destroyed; the foundations of the bridge have been leveled. (3)
4. No other bridges or river crossing facilities were observed in Goerlitz. (4)

25X1 Comments.

25X1 (1) This bridge, called Reichenberger road bridge was reconstructed in a makeshift way.

25X1 (2) The reconstruction of this railroad viaduct was scheduled for the second half of 1951. For unknown reasons, this project has been postponed. The pinpoint location of this viaduct was transmitted previously.

25X1 (3) This statement is believed to refer to the former Altstadt bridge, information on the location of which was transmitted previously. The bridge was reported as being destroyed.

25X1 (4) Previously three foot bridges were also available in Goerlitz. However, they were reported as being destroyed.
